

PENNSYLVANIA ADOPTION FACTS

3,379 foster children in Pennsylvania are waiting to be adopted

Adoption provides children with a lifetime of emotional and legal connections to a family. Foster children who cannot return home risk reaching adulthood without a permanent family of their own. In 2008, Congress passed the Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act, which will help more children find permanent families. Despite this progress, thousands of children—especially older children and children of color—still wait for families. And many families who have adopted lack critical post-adoption support that is essential to their children’s long-term stability and well-being.

Foster care was intended to be temporary, but many Pennsylvania children remain in care for years.

For children waiting to be adopted in Pennsylvania, the average length of stay in care is more than three years (37.5 months). On average, children who were adopted in 2007 spent about three years (36.8 months) in care before the adoption was finalized.

To shorten the time children spend in care, child welfare agencies must employ the best recruitment tools possible to find families.

Older children in Pennsylvania are not as likely to be adopted as younger children.

The average age of Pennsylvania’s adopted children is about 6.6 years, while waiting children are, on average, roughly 7.9 years old. Research shows that for youth over the age of 9, the likelihood of being adopted drops significantly.

Age of Pennsylvania Children Waiting to Be Adopted and Adopted, 2007

Special strategies must be employed to ensure that older children are adopted, and that their newly formed families have the support they need.

A higher proportion of African American children are waiting to be adopted than are adopted in Pennsylvania.

	Children Waiting	Children Adopted
African American	44%	37%
Caucasian	42%	48%
Hispanic	9%	11%
Multiple Races	1%	1%

Disproportionate outcomes for children of color can be addressed by investing in services to keep children safely at home. For children who enter care, agencies must create programs to address the unique racial and cultural needs of children of color, including seeking families who reflect the background of children in care, as required by law.

In 2007, most Pennsylvania children left foster care to return home (56%) or live with relatives or in guardianship (13%). 1,926 children (15% of all exits) were adopted.

Children who found permanent families need support to help them recover from the trauma of abuse and neglect and the experience of being in care.

Exit Types for Pennsylvania Foster Children, 2007

Post-permanency services should be available to families who adopt, accept guardianship, or are reunified with their children to help make permanent families as strong as possible.

In 2007, 1,064 youth in Pennsylvania aged out of foster care without a permanent, legal family.

Research shows that many of these youth will face significant obstacles in the future, including homelessness, unemployment, depression and substance abuse.

The best way to improve these outcomes is to ensure that youth do not age out of care without a family. For those youth who do not find a family, states and counties must provide support to help them make the transition to independent living with the help and support of caring adults.

Most children adopted from foster care in Pennsylvania are adopted by foster parents and relatives.

In Pennsylvania, 58 percent of children adopted in 2007 were adopted by their foster parents. Roughly 20 percent were adopted by relatives.

Pennsylvania Adopting Parents' Relationship to Child Prior to Adoption, 2007

If foster parents and relatives are provided with adequate support from the beginning of a child's experience in care, they will be in a better position to provide children with the permanency they need if they can't return home. By setting adoption assistance rates equal to foster care rates, agencies can help ensure that foster parents have an incentive to adopt.

As a result of the Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act of 2008, many more children with special needs adopted from foster care will be eligible for federal adoption assistance by 2018.

About 79 percent of Pennsylvania children adopted in 2007 were receiving Title IV-E federal adoption assistance. Many of the children who were not IV-E eligible did not qualify due to their birth parents' income. Some children who do not qualify for federal assistance receive no adoption subsidies at all.

The new law eliminates birth parent income as an eligibility factor. As a result, many more Pennsylvania children will qualify for and receive federal assistance. Beginning with adoptions finalized on or after October 1, 2009, all children 16 and older and children who have been in care for five years or longer—and their siblings—will receive federal support, as long as they have special needs and meet other eligibility requirements. Each year, younger children will be phased in for federal support (14 and older in 2011, 12 and older in 2012, and so on) until 2018 when federal support will be given to all children with special needs who meet other eligibility criteria.

In 2007, 455 (13%) of Pennsylvania's waiting children had been in care for five years or more. Of those, 173 were not receiving IV-E payments. Also in 2007, about 244 of the waiting children who were not receiving IV-E payments (24%) were 14 or older.

Pennsylvania Waiting Children Who Are Not Receiving Federal Support—by Age, 2007

Pennsylvania has an important opportunity to promote adoption for many children who can now receive federal adoption assistance for the first time. The state can make significant progress on its permanency outcomes by targeting intensive recruitment efforts for these children.